WASHINGTON, D. C.

Mobile is indebted to the Mobile Genealogical Society for the statistics that they have compiled with strict attention to details.

It is important to note that more interest is being shown in genealogy at the present time than formerly; people are becoming more conscious of family history and the affairs of their cities.

1214133

This publication covers three major yellow-fever periods in our City. They were; 1821-22, 1837-1843 and 1853-56.

In re-copying these old records we note that on January 2nd. 1827, the recordings stop and resume again some eight years later with the next entry being June 1st. 1835. Of the intervening years we can only assume they were destroyed by one of the Court House fires. Every effort has been made to locate them, but to no avail.

Many nationalities were represented in early Mobile according to the records in this publication; Poland, Germany, France, Prussia, Spain, England, to name a few.

During these earliest epidemics, rogues and thieves were rampant in their ill-gotten gain, and trade and traffic was halted. The sick tended the sick, and there were no funerals. In most cases the driver of the hearse cart and the grave digger were the only ones comprising a funeral party, and many were left unburied in the graveyard overnight, so hard pressed were they for labor.

Death prevailed everywhere, and the poor were reduced to beggary, and the rich were known to accept alms. It was no respecter of persons, and bad and good, rich and poor went down together. Those who could, escaped, many to die on the way. It was swift and violent, most dying within 48 hours. Some only 12 hours, while others lingered longer, and few lived thru it. In certain sections of the town there was almost a continuous procession to the grave.

During the yellow-fever periods some of the Mobile Doctors contributed all their time to treatment and research as to the causes and prevention of yellow-fever, they are; Dr. Jabez W. Heustis, Dr. William Crawford Gorgas, and Dr. Josiah Clark Nott who was the founder of the Medical College in Mobile.

Also Dr. Walter Reed of Gloucester, Virginia, a Curator of the Army Medical School in Washington, D. C. made important discoveries in eliminating the disease.

Mobile is extremely fortunate in having preserved records as early as this, and the Mobile Genealogical Society plans other rare publications for the benefit of Historians and Genealogists.

Editor's Note: The above information was supplied by Mrs. Emma Cortez Harris, Director Emeritus of the Mobile Public Library. Mrs. Harris has been in Mobile Library work since 1917 and is well known for her work and interest in Mobile history.

Acknowledgement

We wish to take this space to thank Dr. O. L. Chason, County Health Officer, and Mrs. Lois Horne, Director of Vital Statistics at the Mobile County Board of Health for their kind efforts in making this publication possible.
